INVESTMENT PROCESS

Washington Capital (WaCap) believes that real estate equity investors are best served by an investment approach that focuses on income-producing properties combined with the appreciation benefits of development projects. We seek to create this value in multiple ways: portfolio diversification, a focus on income, executing development opportunities, and maintaining a local market presence.

PORTFOLIO DIVERSIFICATION

We invest across the United States and seek to allocate to properties located in core business districts (CBD) and non-CBD markets as they tend to have different market cycles. Development properties are targeted between 15% and 30% of the overall portfolio to reflect the inherent risk and return associated with these projects. Finally, the size of any individual property is typically limited to no more than 5% of the total portfolio.

FOCUS ON INCOME

Over market cycles, real estate income returns tend to be less volatile than appreciation returns. We focus on income opportunities and look to acquire and develop properties that have income growth potential. We may also acquire existing properties that can be improved with new capital projects and then repositioned for enhanced income.

DEVELOPMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Our portfolio pursues a core plus strategy with a combination of development projects and stabilized or value-added operating properties. We seek to provide investment returns through capturing the appreciation associated with the development and construction phases of real estate. With our strategy of "build-to-core," the completed properties may be retained to provide current income and long term capital growth.

LOCAL MARKET PRESENCE

We believe that being a successful real estate investor requires maintaining a local presence in the markets in which we invest. To this end, we maintain a "branch office" organizational structure in our primary investment markets. Our presence in local markets often allows us to acquire properties that are not marketed broadly. Our investment professionals develop direct relationships with local sellers and developers who are the source of many opportunities.
